NEW CHAIR OF THE APAC BOARD

APAC is pleased to announce that Professor Caroline Hunt has been appointed as the new Chair of the APAC Board. Caroline, who is based at the University of Sydney, succeeds Professor Simon Crowe, who completed his two year term as Chair in June 2018. In addition to being a member of the APAC Board since 2010, Caroline has been the Chair of the Accreditation and Assessment Committee for four years. She previously served on the New South Wales Board of the Psychology Board of Australia and was the inaugural President of the New South Wales Psychology Council.

Caroline said 'I am delighted to be appointed to this position at an important time for APAC, with the rollout of our new accreditation standards due to commence on 1 January 2019. I would like to thank my predecessor, Simon Crowe, for his work and I am very much looking forward to working with the Board and APAC staff over what promises to be an exciting next few years'.
